

Mr Scissors VS The Paper Man

Chapter 1: Cut in half

Mr Scissors was a man with scissors for hands. He spent his life fighting crime, especially against a supervillain called The Paper Man, who was a man made of paper with many tricks up his sleeves. Here are some of his adventures:

One night, The Paper Man sneaked towards a doughnut shop. The owners of this shop usually left their money behind the counter, and there was not much security. The door was locked and there was a piece of paper blu-tacked to the inside of the door that said DOUGHNUT TRESPASS. He ignored it. Being made of paper, he was extremely thin. He slid under a gap in the door and sneaked over to the counter. He had taken a paper bag with him and fastened it to him with a stapler. He now put all the money in the shop in it and ran off. But Mr Scissors was watching him.

Mr Scissors was hiding in a nearby bush. He burst out of hiding and used one of his hands to cut The Paper Man in half. He cut the paper bag in half too, and all the money fell out. But the two halves of The Paper Man turned into two smaller paper men who picked up the money in their arms and ran off again. What could Mr Scissors do?

Chapter 2: The water pistol

Mr Scissors suddenly noticed a water pistol lying on the street. He picked it up and ran after The Paper Man. He pressed the trigger and one of the Paper Men was soaked.

He fell over, unable to move. Mr Scissors pressed the trigger again and the same thing happened to the other Paper Man. "This water pistol could come in handy," he thought. The police arrived and took The Paper Man away. They put him in prison.

Chapter 3: The Umbrella

There was a small gap under the bars of The Paper Man's prison cell. He slipped under the bars at midnight. All the doors were locked but he simply slipped under them all and eventually got out the front door. He knew that Mr Scissors would be waiting for him in the hedge outside the doughnut shop again, so this time he decided to go somewhere else. There was a bank nearby, so he went there and slipped under the door. There were three silver vaults inside and he slipped into one of them through a gap at the bottom. He pushed all the paper notes out through the gap, but he couldn't get the coins out. He then slipped into the next vault and did the same. Eventually, he grabbed all the paper notes and an umbrella that someone had left on the table. He used a stapler to staple all the notes on him and slipped back under the door. But Mr Scissors was not in the bush. He was on top of the doughnut shop, and he could see the entire town. Seeing The Paper Man, he jumped down and squirted him with his water pistol. But the liquid hit the umbrella and didn't do anything to The Paper Man, who kept running. So Mr Scissors cut a hole in the umbrella with his left hand and squirted The Paper Man with the water pistol, which he held in his right hand. The Paper Man fell over. The police came and took him back to prison again.

Chapter 4: The boat

This time there was no gap in the bottom of The Paper Man's prison cell. However, there was one on the top and he turned himself into a paper ladder and climbed up. After that, escape was pretty much the same as last time. After getting out, he snuck into a nearby house and stole a plastic bag and their credit card. Then he withdrew a lot of money from the bank and ran towards the beach. Mr Scissors saw him and ran after him. But he turned into a paper boat, wrapped the plastic bag around the hull so he wouldn't get wet and sailed off. Mr Scissors fired at the paper boat, but it was already out of firing range. Thinking quickly, he found some pebbles and threw them at the boat. One of them hit the boat and it began to sink. The hull was protected by the plastic bag, but the deck wasn't. The paper boat filled with water and turned back into The Paper Man, who started to sink. "Help!" He shouted. "I can't swim!"

Mr Scissors jumped into the water, taking care not to let his hands go underwater because otherwise the scissors would rust. He grabbed The Paper Man, being sure not to cut him, and dragged him back to the bank. Then he cut off The Paper Man's nose, to see if it would turn into a teeny tiny paper man. It did, but both paper men were wet so they couldn't do anything. The police came again and put The Paper man back in prison, with instructions not to let him escape again.

Chapter 5: The plane

This time The Paper Man's cell had no gaps at the top or the bottom. But the lock was really big. He squeezed himself into a paper tube and slid through it. Then he got out of the other doors the same way he had always done: sliding under them. This time he went to a mansion and stole ten diamonds from a treasure chest. The treasure chest was locked and had no gaps but he turned his hand into a key and opened the chest. He was running away with his prize when Mr Scissors spotted him again. Thinking quickly, he turned into a paper plane and flew away, laughing. Mr Scissors tried to squirt him but The Paper Man was too high. Mr Scissors tried jumping up and cutting a wing off, but he couldn't jump that high. What could he do?

Chapter 6: Springs

Just then, Mr Scissors spotted some springs lying on the street. He put them on his feet and jumped again. BOING! He was as high as the paper plane now, and cut a wing off. The plane and the wing fell down and turned into two paper men, who he squirted with his water pistol. The police came and took them away, yet again.

Chapter 7: The Photocopier

The Paper Man's cell had no gaps anywhere and the lock was not hollow so you could only access the hole from the other side. But in the middle of the day, The Paper Man ripped off one of his hands and turned it into a beard.

"Hang on a minute, we've got the wrong guy!" Exclaimed a guard. "The Paper Man doesn't have a beard!" They apologised to him and let him go at once. He snuck into a house, sellotaped his hand back on and was just about to leave when he spied something in the room. A photocopier. He turned it on and put himself on the area where the paper was scanned. The photocopier got to work immediately. Soon there were a hundred Paper Men in the house.

"We have been running away from Mr Scissors for too long," said the original Paper Man. "We must strike back! And we can now! After all, he can't get us all!"

That night, Mr Scissors was surprised to see a hundred Paper Men charging towards him. "We found a photocopier," they said together. "Time to die, Mr Scissors!"

Some of the Paper Men were even holding paper swords and spears! They charged towards him! He shot a few paper men with his water pistol but more charged forwards to replace them. Then they surrounded him, giving him paper cuts. Suddenly, a plan formed in his head. He picked up his water pistol and blasted some of the Paper Men, creating a route out. Then he ran as fast as he could towards the beach.

"He's running away! Get him!" Yelled the Paper Men together. They charged after him. Mr Scissors ran into the sea and started swimming. By the time the Paper Men realised where they were going, it was too late. They were already in the water and fell over. The police operation to save the Paper Men was extremely complicated. It involved lots of police boats and fishing nets, and only one Paper Man survived: the original one. He was furious. He was so angry that the moment he was dry he burst into flames and had to be put out with a hose, which made him even wetter. They put him in a cell with no gaps, a lock that didn't go all the way through and a guard posted inside at all times to stop him from putting on disguise. He never got out again.

The End